MARCH 1967

A man was perched atop one of Richmond's buildings contemplating suicide, and a policeman had made his way up to the roof to try to persuade him not to jump.

"Think of your mother and father," pleaded the officer.

"Haven't any."

"Think of your wife and family."

"Haven't any."

"Then think of your girl friend."

"Hate women!"

"All right. Then think of Robert E. Lee."

"Who is he?"

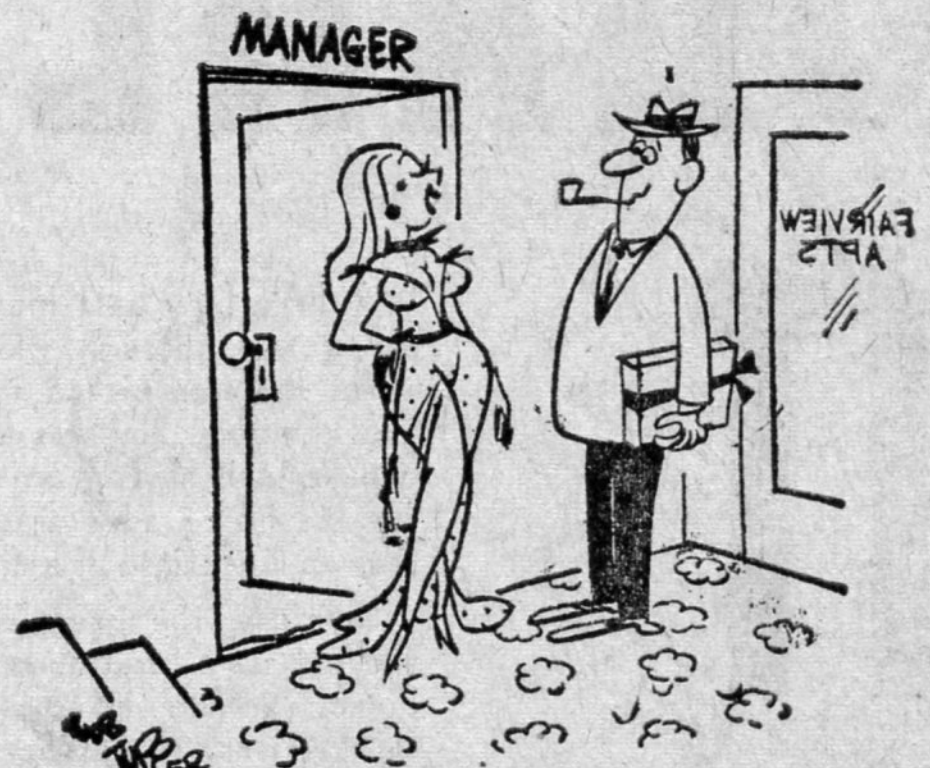

"Jump, you damn Yankee."

I got it for kissing the bride after the ceremony—
—two years after.

Two gentlemen were eating lunch in a newly opened restaurant. When the waitress brought their coffee she got chummy. Pirouetting gracefully in front of their table, she asked them how they liked her uniform; it was green with white trim, with her name embroidered over the left breast pocket.

Studying her thoughtfully one of the men said, "I like it very much, but tell me, what are you going to name the other one?"

A little lady field mouse was going out through the fields when she was picked up by a big combine. She was bumped around and shaken up quite a bit before she was finally thrown back into the field.

Painfully, the bewildered little mouse dragged herself home. When asked by her mother what had happened to her she said: "Oh, Mother, I think I've been reaped!"

Long on egotism but short on cash, the young actor was trying to talk his impatient landlord into waiting for the rent.

"In a few years," he said, "people will point to this apartment and say: 'Smith, the famous actor, once lived in there.'"

"If I don't get my rent tonight," said the landlord, "they'll be able to say it tomorrow."

IT'S A CRIME

I don't know if I should go straight when I get out, or go back into politics . . .

A Martian landed in New York recently and he stepped out of his space ship. He found that he had stopped next to a parking meter. The Martian stared at it for a moment, and then turned to someone passing by and asked,

"Say, would you have two glubs for a mock?"

In the event of war, here's an encouraging note; an air-raid manual in Washington says this:

"All funeral coaches must pull to the curb and stop when the siren sounds, although the occupants are not required to seek shelter."

Hotel Manager: "Did you find any of our towels in that salesman's suitcase?"

Hotel Detective: "No, but I found a chambermaid in his grip."

There had been an accident. It was the same old thing—a college student's convertible had collided headon with the farmer's Model A. The two drivers got out and surveyed the damage.

"Well," said the farmer, "We may as well have a drink." He handed a bottle to the student who gulped down a stiff one.

The farmer calmly returned the bottle to his pocket.

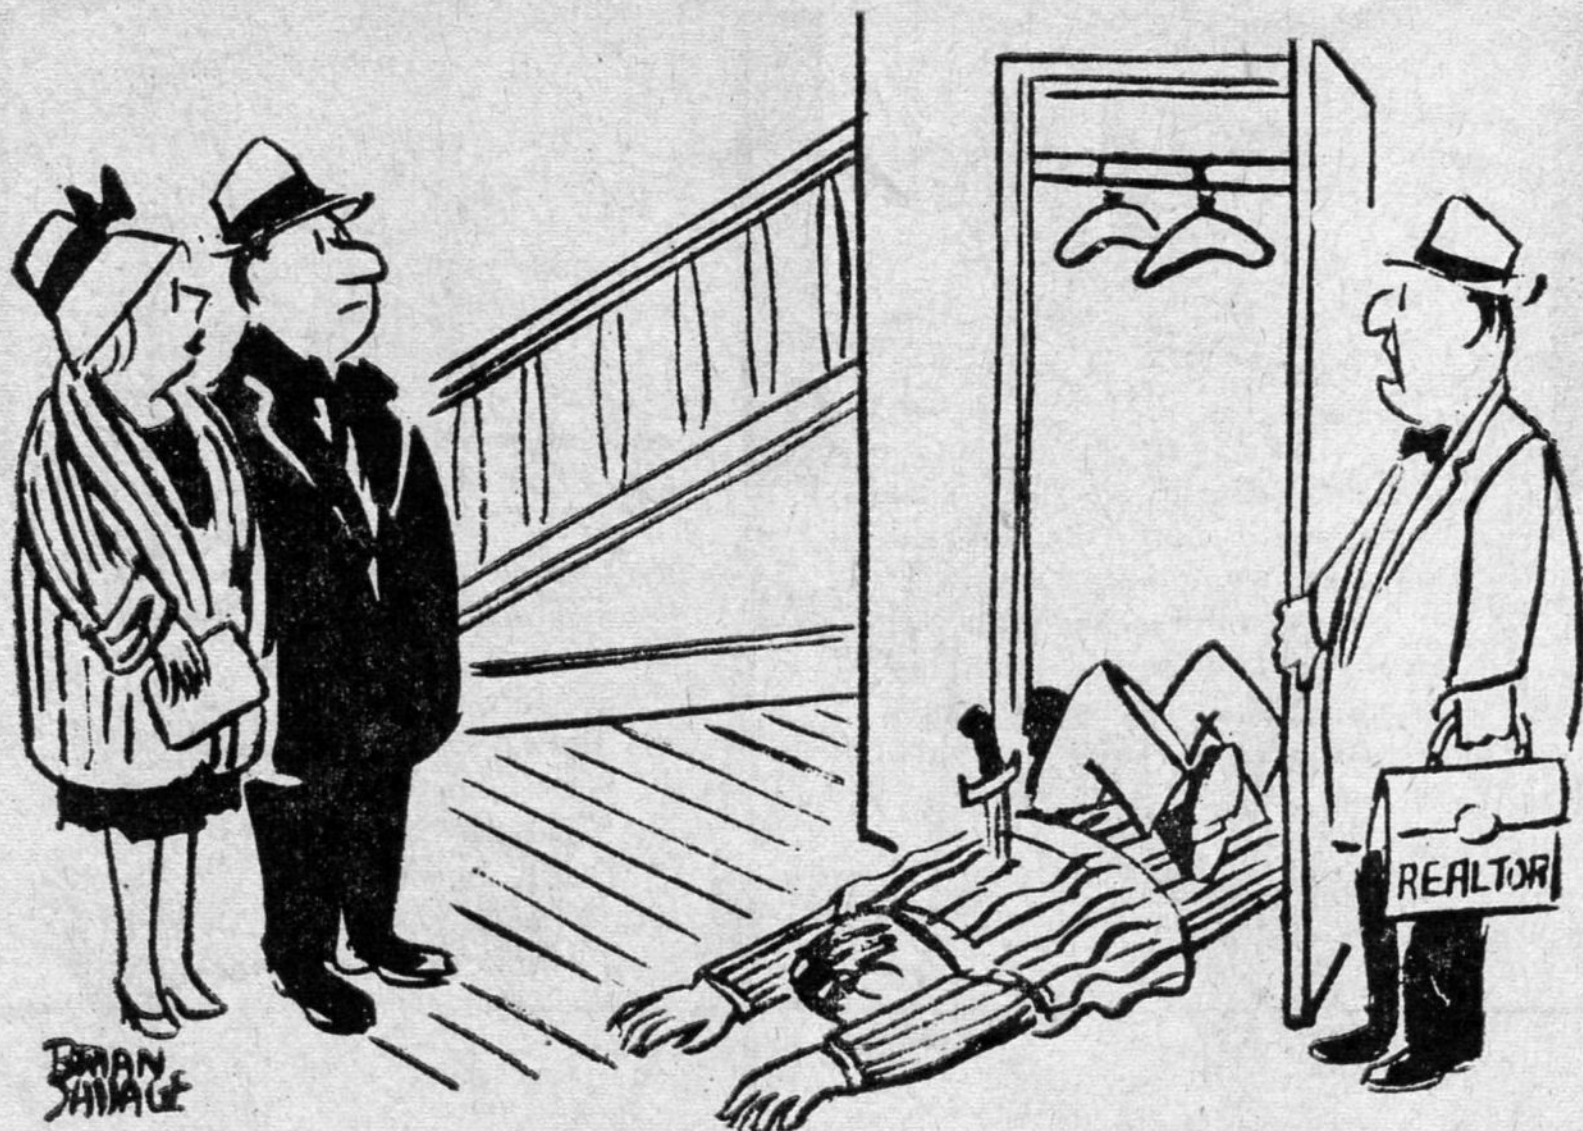

"Aren't you going to have one?" asked the student.

"Don't believe I will," the farmer said, "until the police have checked up."

Crowded hotel rooms or not, my wife and I haven't been to a convention in years we've enjoyed so much!

A gravedigger, absorbed in his work, dug a grave so deep he couldn't get out. Came nightfall and his predicament became more and more uncomfortable. He shouted for help and at last attracted the attention of a drunk.

"Get me out of here," he shouted. "I'm cold."

The drunk looked down and finally distinguished the form of the unfortunate gravedigger.

"No wonder you're cold," he said. "You haven't any dirt over you."

It's getting so bad that all the average man can afford to put away for a rainy day is a pair of dry sox.

An American said to his English friend, "We always eat what we can and what we can't we can!"

Upon returning to his native land the Englishman said, "I heard a good one in America. Over there they always eat what they can, and what they can't they put up in tins!"

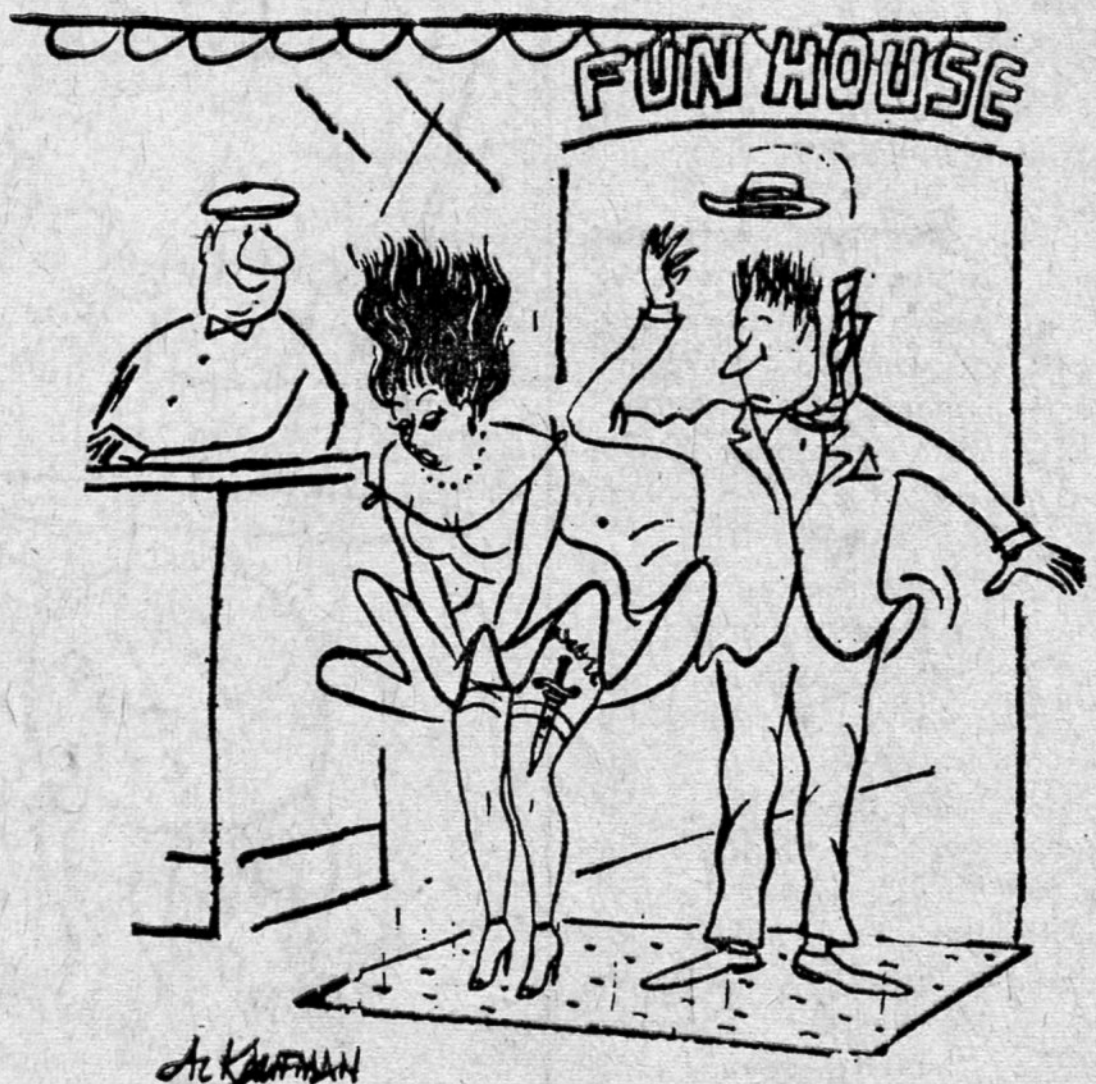

A toper staggered into Sam's one night and yelled in a loud voice, "When I drink, everybody drinks!" He summoned everyone to the bar. When he finished his whiskey he shouted again, "When I take another drink, everybody takes another drink!"

Again, everybody gathered around the bar. When he finished that one the drunk took a dollar out of his pocket and slapped it on the bar. "When I pay," he screamed, "everybody pays!"

The wife was concerned about her alcoholic husband.

"Treat him with kindness," advised the doctor. "Don't nag him the next time he comes home drunk. Be nice to him."

Determining to follow the suggestion, she waited that night until her husband lurched into the house and collapsed on the sofa in the living room.

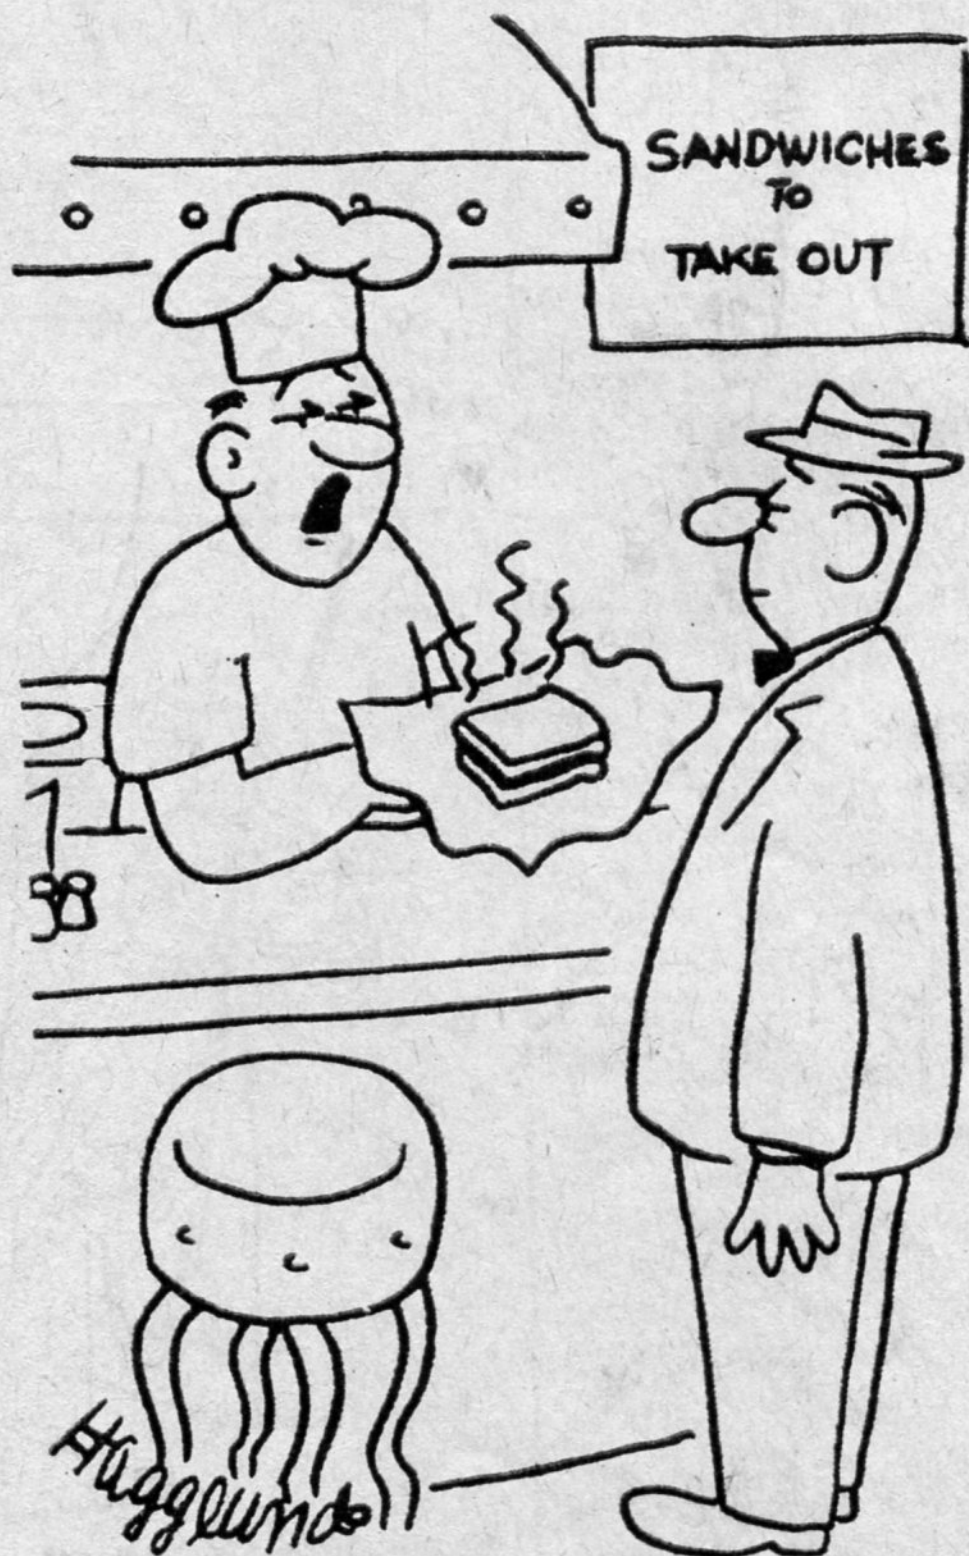

She kissed him warmly, ran her fingers through his hair and tried to rouse him from his stupor. "Honey," she whispered, "let's go upstairs and go to bed."

"Might as well," he mumbled thickly. "I'll get hell when I get home anyway."

A Hollywood babe managed to latch onto an inconspicuous part in a great screen epic. The director was an exacting fellow, however, with an unlimited bankroll, and the projected 2-month shooting schedule stretched out first to four months, then to six. Finally the bored "actress" inquired plaintively of a columnist, "Say, who do you think I'd have to romance to get out of this darn picture?"

Shall I wrap it up or will you get sick here?

Halt, or we'll shoot!

The elderly wolf had been trying for some time to date his new secretary. He always got a polite but firm turndown. On his birthday he decided to try again, and this time to his delight she said, "Yes."

He was on his best behavior all evening, the perfect gentleman with no hint of his wolfish tendencies. On the stroke of midnight he took the girl home. At her door he kissed her hand, deciding to make a good impression for a future campaign.

"Won't you come up for a nightcap?"

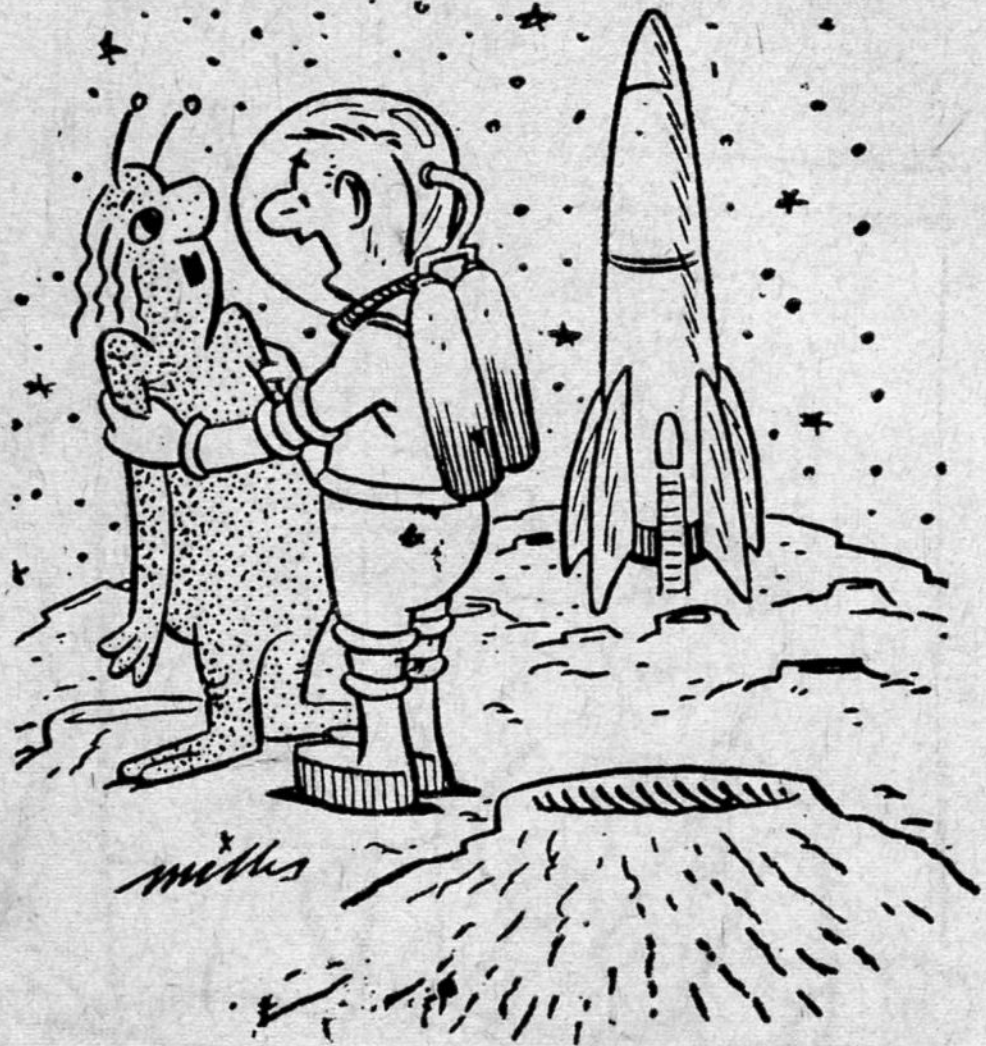

"Why, yes," he said, licking his chops, not expecting this sudden turn of events.

"Why don't you go in the bedroom and make yourself comfy while I fix a drink," she suggested when they entered her apartment. "That dinner jacket must be uncomfortable."

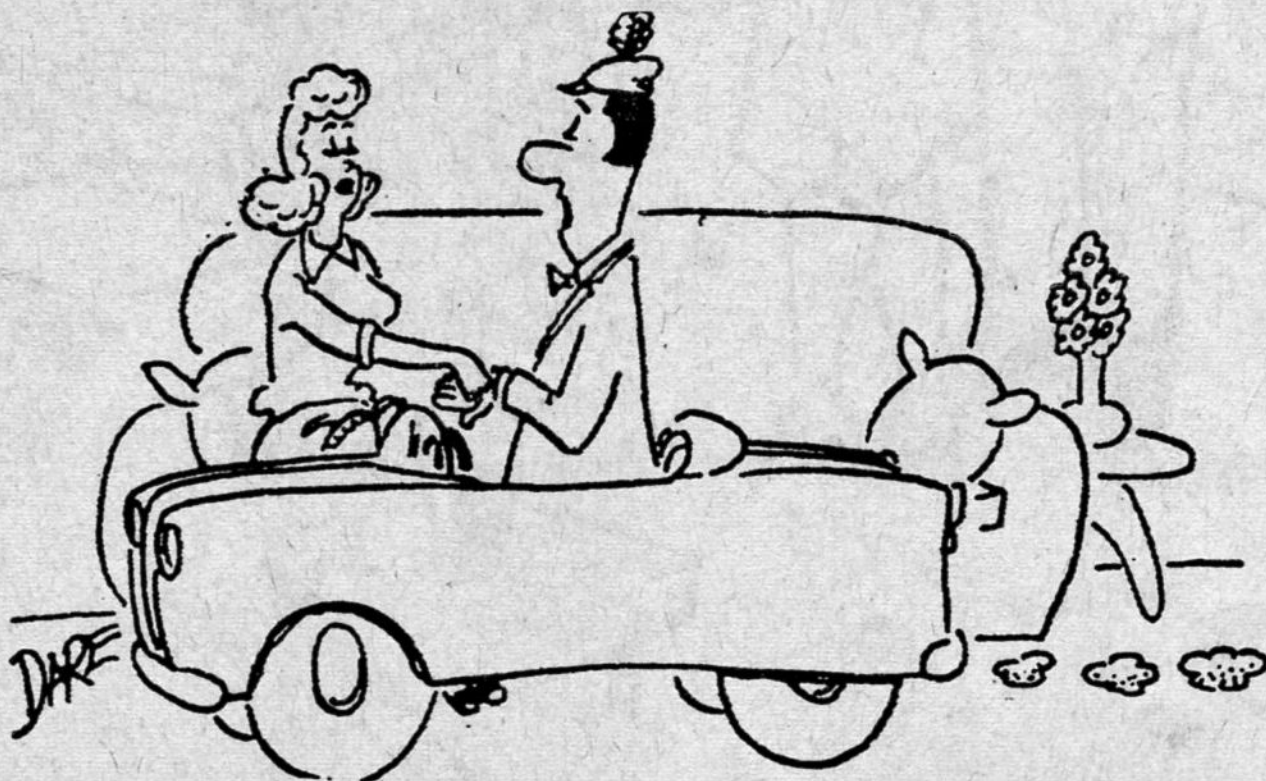

"Wow!" he silently drooled to himself. "Who expected this?"

He stripped down to his wrist watch and returned to the living room which was pitch dark. "Hey! Where are you?" he asked, groping.

Suddenly the lights went on, and all his employees sang, "Surprise! Surprise! Happy Birthday to you!"

The young thing was sitting on her front porch knitting some tiny garments and her mother said to a neighbor: "I'm glad to see that she has taken an interest in something other than running around with boys."

The teacher's first report to the parents of little Johnny was very encouraging. "Johnny is a bright, alert and capable youngster," read the comment, "but I believe he spends too much time playing up to the girls. I have a plan, however, and I think it will break him of the habit."

Johnny's mother acknowledged the teacher's report, but added this note of her own: "Please let me know if your plan works. I'd like to try it on his father."

An Englishman was attending a football game with an American cousin.

"See that man sitting in the stands," said the American, "He spent $10,000 to send his son to college and all he got was a quarterback!"

Upon returning to England the Englishman said, "I saw a man in America who spent $10,000 to send his son to college and all he got back was 25 cents!"

Son: "Ma, what's the idea of makin' me sleep up here every night?"

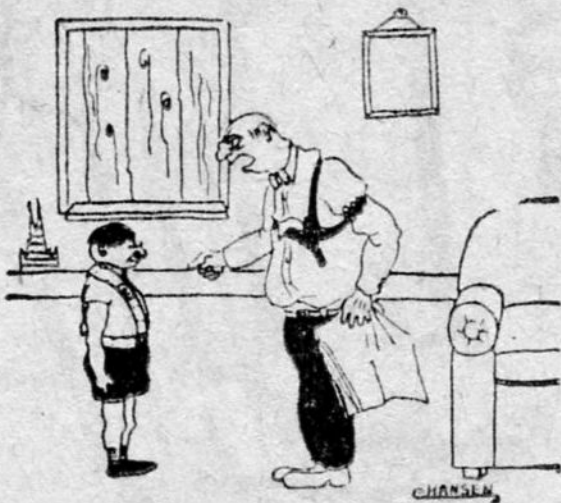

Mother: "Hush, Bobby, you only have to sleep on the mantle-piece two more weeks and then your picture will be in Believe-it-or-Not."

Doubtfully the young mother examined the toy. "Isn't this rather complicated for a small child?" she asked.

"It's an educational toy, madam," replied the shop assistant. "It's designed to adjust a child to live in the world of today. Any way he puts it together it is wrong."

Teachers: "Now, Johnny, if I lay two eggs here and three over there, how many will there be altogether?"

Johnny: "Personally, I don't think you can do it."

Nine year-old Annie had frequent run-ins with her mother on the subject of her untidiness. Suddenly one day she began to clean her room, pick up her clothes and put her toys and books on the shelves where they belonged.

Her mother, startled but gratified, wondered whether her scoldings were finally taking effect. "What has come over you, Annie?" she asked.

"I'm scared stiff, mother," the girl admitted. "I read in last night's paper that the police arrested two girls for keeping a disorderly house."

"And the boys and girls often matriculate together?"

"No!" exclaimed the lawmaker.

The legislator shrank back in horror.

Most people in Georgia don't believe in heaven; they think they die and go to Atlanta.

A man was asked to give a speech at a Lions Club meeting. After much thought he decided to talk on sex.

When he returned home after giving the speech, his wife asked him what he had talked about. He didn't want to tell her he had spoken on sex so he told her he had talked about his experiences as a flier.

The next day his wife ran into the wife of one of the Lions Club members.

"That must have been quite a speech your husband gave last night," she said. "He must be quite an authority on the subject."

"Oh, I don't know," the wife replied, "he's only done it twice. The first time he lost his hat and the second time he got sick to his stomach."

"Listen," he snapped, "we're going through that course again, and we're going to keep right on running through it until everyone does just right." He paused, then continued with a smile. "Now each of you just imagine there's a rich blonde at the end of the course, waiting for you."

"Make it a poor redhead, captain," called out somebody from the rear. "She'll meet us halfway!"

Although the families in TV serials are composed of stupid husbands, smug wives, and ill-mannered children, there's one thing you have to admire about them—they don't waste their time watching TV.

The absent-minded professor and his absent-minded wife were spending a quiet evening at home when the door bell rang. She yelled, "O gosh, my husband!" and he jumped through the window.

In a large hotel, a lady guest marched up to the desk and announced indignantly: "I thought this was supposed to be a respectable hotel!"

"Why, it is," the desk clerk replied. "Is something wrong?"

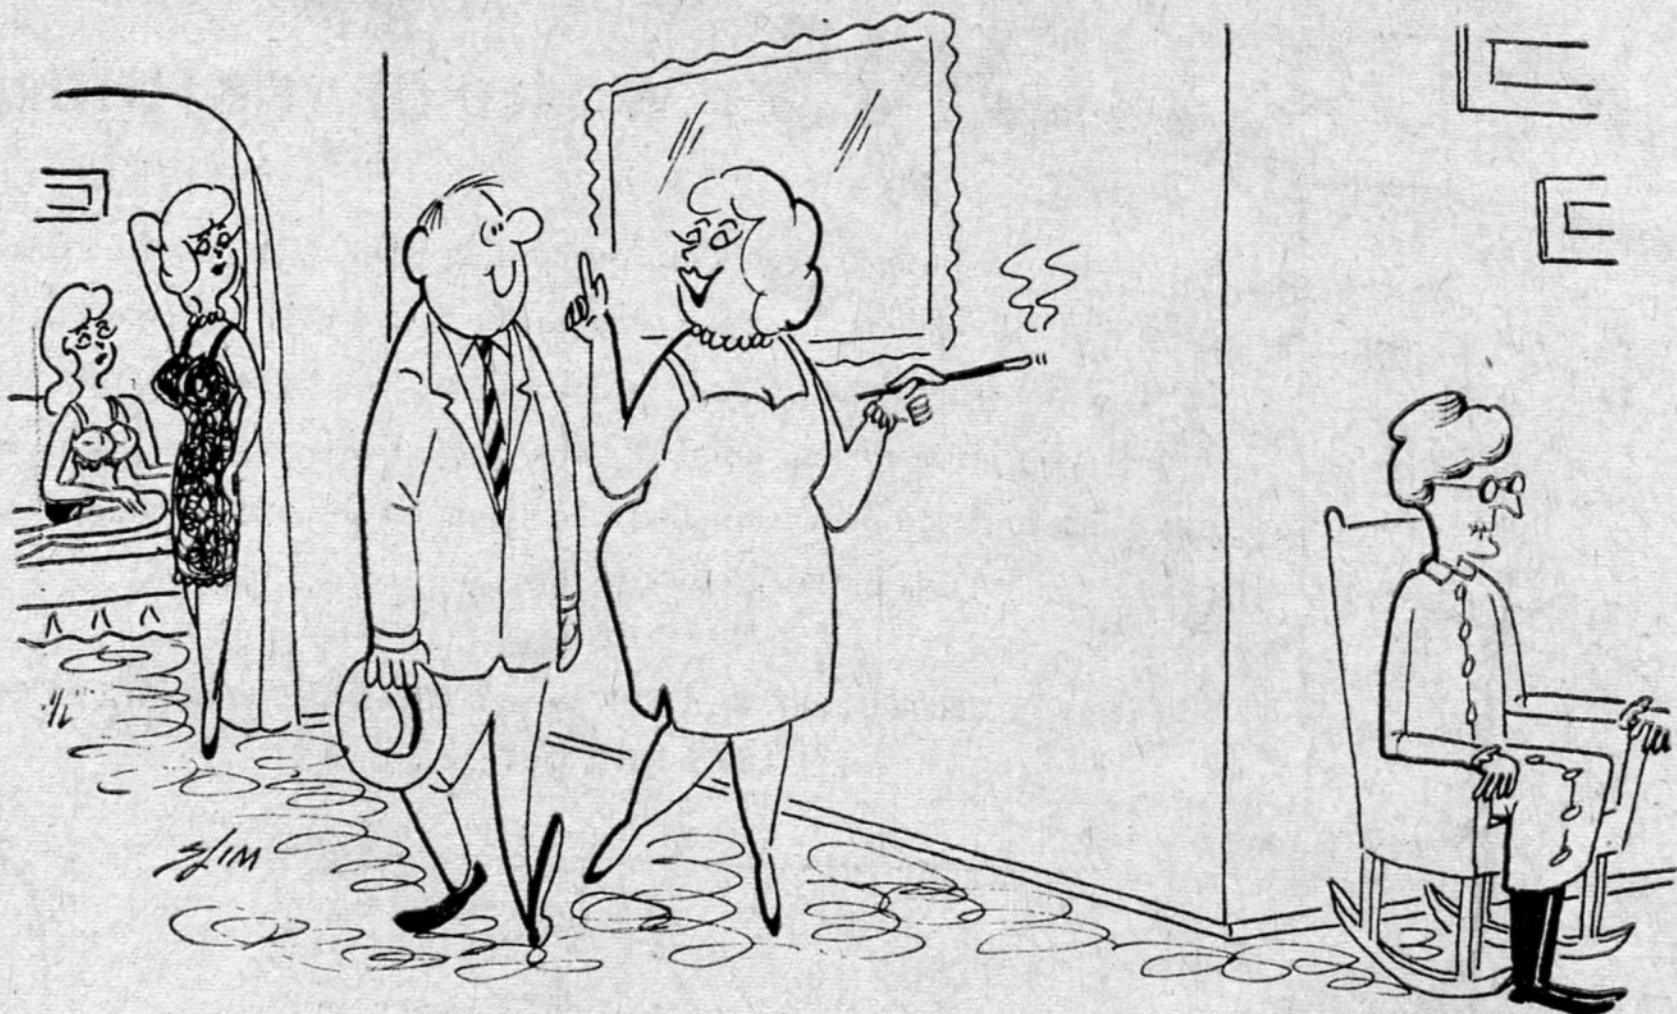

"Well," said the lady, "as I was waiting for the elevator I saw a man chasing a girl down the hall."

"Did he catch her?" asked the clerk.

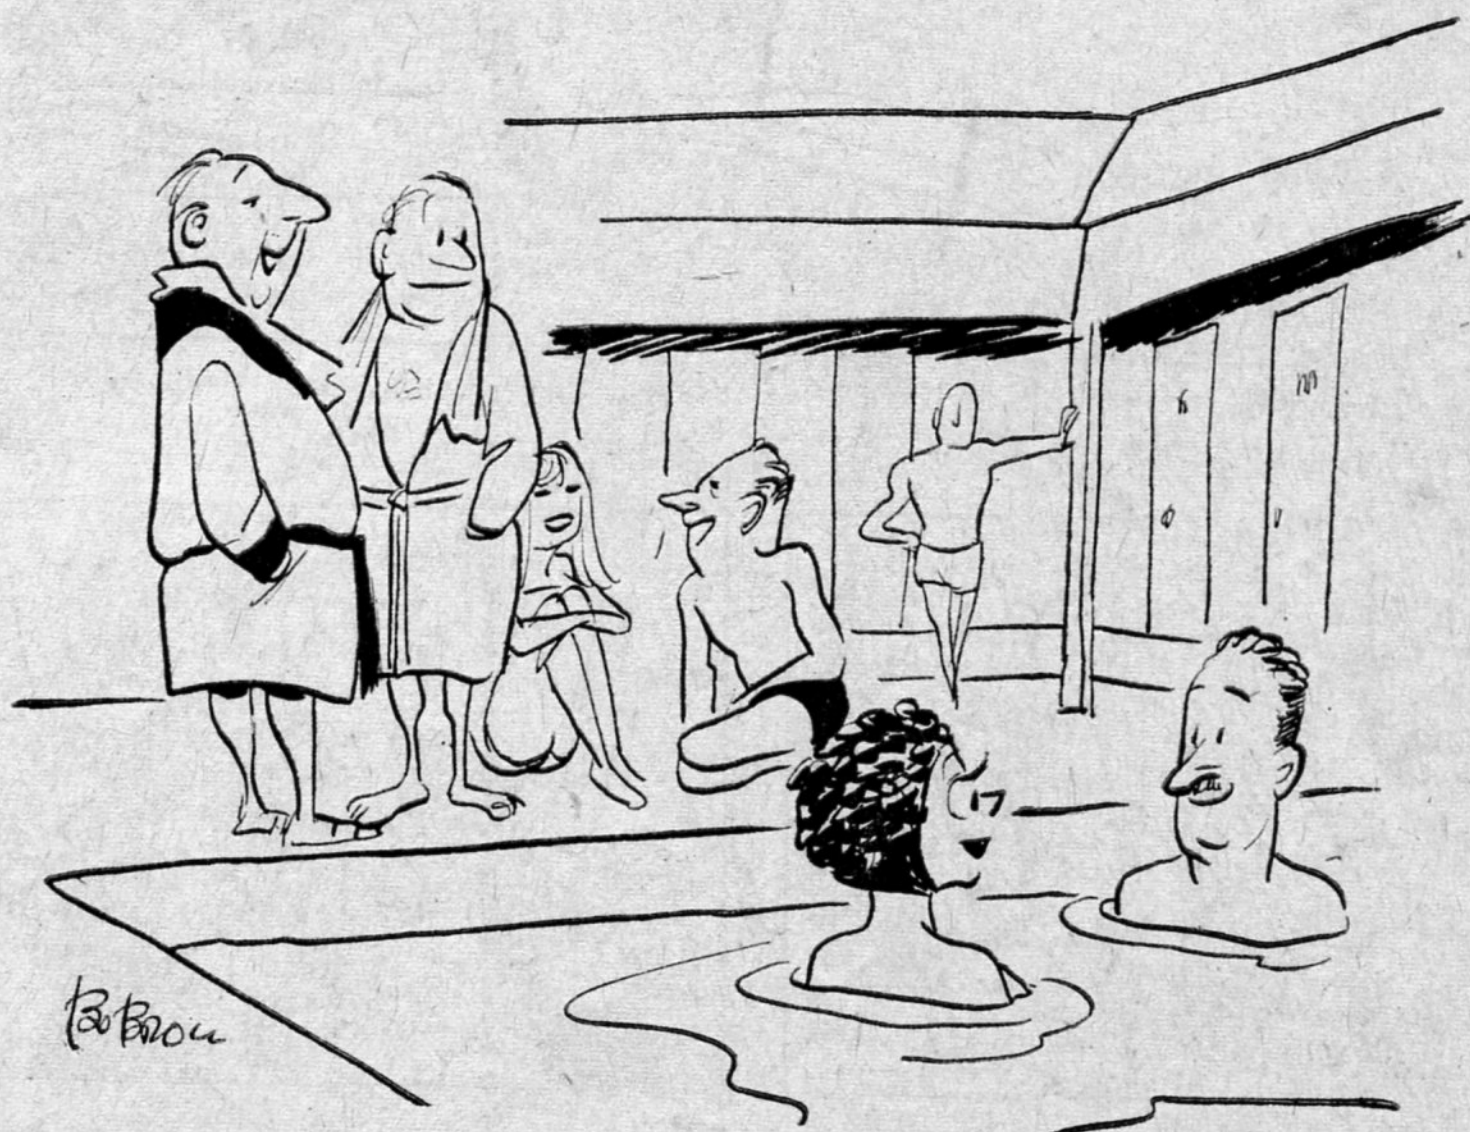

"No," replied the lady.

"Then the hotel remains respectable," said the clerk.

I just remembered, sweetie . . . we do have something in that price range

By the time we get back he'll be retired

You are honest, aggressive and intelligent. You will reach great heights in whichever field of endeavor you enter and, incidentally, if you're not home in half an hour your wife will bawl the hell out of you

Excuse me, is this the stag party where I fell out the window?

Al! What have you been doing all these years?

Here's a news flash—Miss Thompson and I are engaged!

I don't care what kind of medicine they gave you in sick bay—you're not leaving the ship like that!"

Prison guard: Sir, I want to report that 10 prisoners have just broken out.

Warden: Sound the alarm and blow the whistle!

Prison guard: Let me call the doctor first, it looks like it might be measles.

A businessman walked into a restaurant that had a sign in the window, MARY'S HOME COOKING. He ordered his meal which he thoroughly enjoyed. Everyday thereafter he returned to the restaurant. One day he got curious and said to the waiter, I've been coming in here for quite a while but I've never seen Mary. Where is she?" "Well," replied the waiter, "like the sign says, Mary's home cooking."

A Scottish minister asked one of his parishioners named Sandy MacIntosh, "Why don't you come to church any more?"

Sandy replied, "For three reasons, sir. Firstly, I dinna like yer theology; secondly, I dinna like your singing; and thirdly, it was in your church I first met my wife."

A drunk got into a taxi and asked to be driven around the park five times. After the third time around, the drunk shouted to the driver, "Faster—I'm in a hurry."

Asked a small boy, looking up from the evening paper, "Dad, do political plums grow from seeds?"

"No," replied his father, "they result from clever grafting."

A new prison in New York has installed non-sag beds. Perhaps this will help inmates go straight.

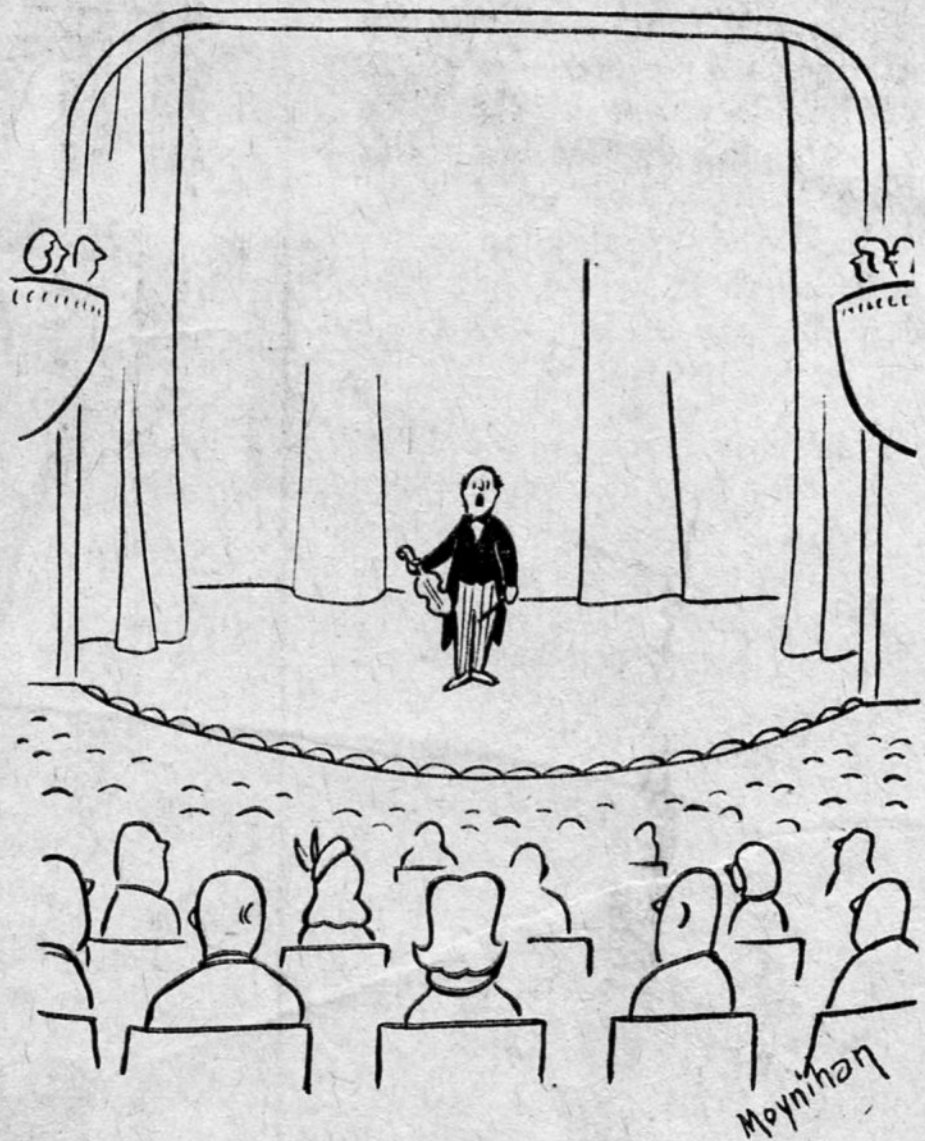

Signs on some desk-top baskets at the Labor Department:

"In"

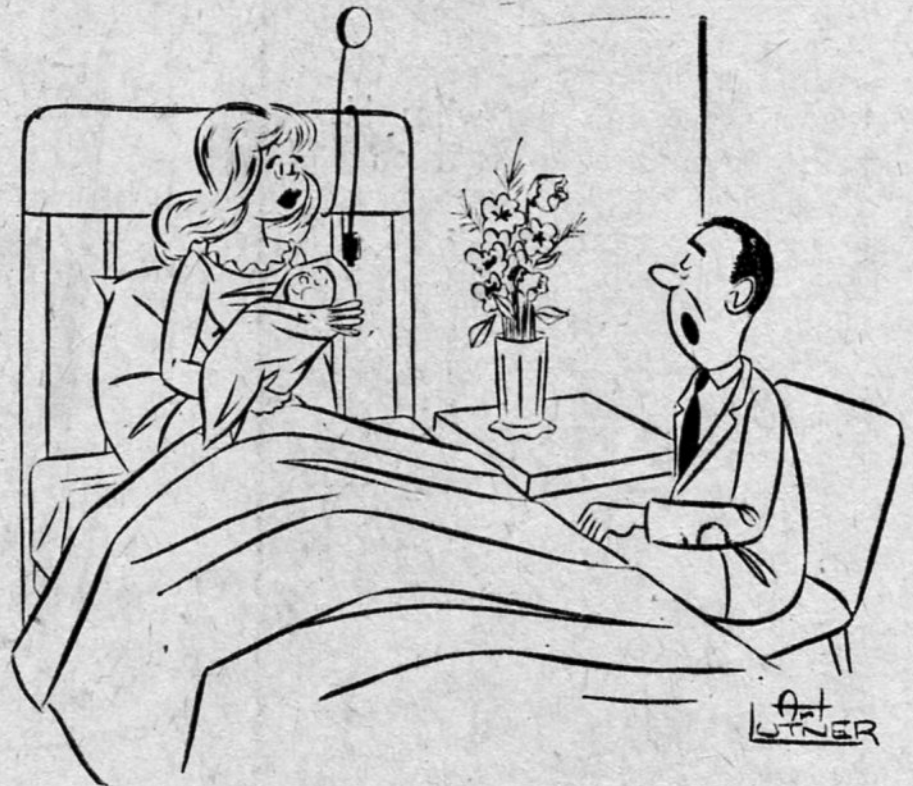

"Out"

"Stalled."

A minister was rushed to the hospital and an inexperienced nurse was assigned to him. She put a barometer in his mouth instead of a thermometer and it read, "dry and windy."

I forgot the rest!

Of course I intend to do the decent thing, Gwendolyn. I'm going to find you a husband

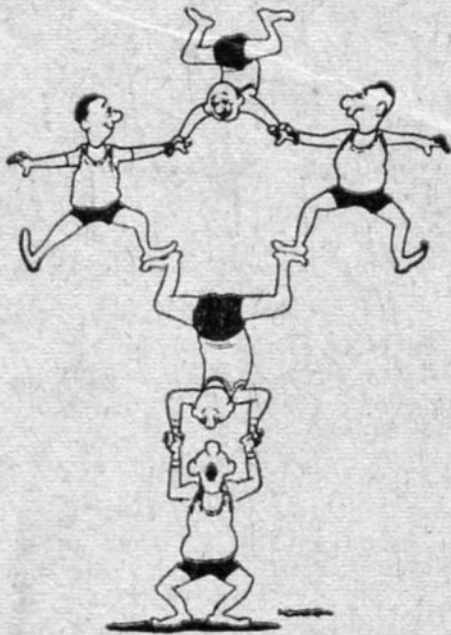

Two little flies were strolling along the ceiling of a New York penthouse. "You know," said the first fly, "people are so silly."

"How do you figure that?"

The little fly shrugged his wings. "Just take a good look," he said. "They spend good money on a nice high ceiling, and then what do they do but walk along the floor."

A business tycoon who painted for diversion got short shrift when he asked a young lady of his acquaintance to pose for him in the nude. "I'm not a model, I'll have you know," she said haughtily.

"That's all right," soothed the tycoon, "I'm not an artist."

Salvador's to call his wife; his house is on fire—pass it on

When was the last time you breathed?

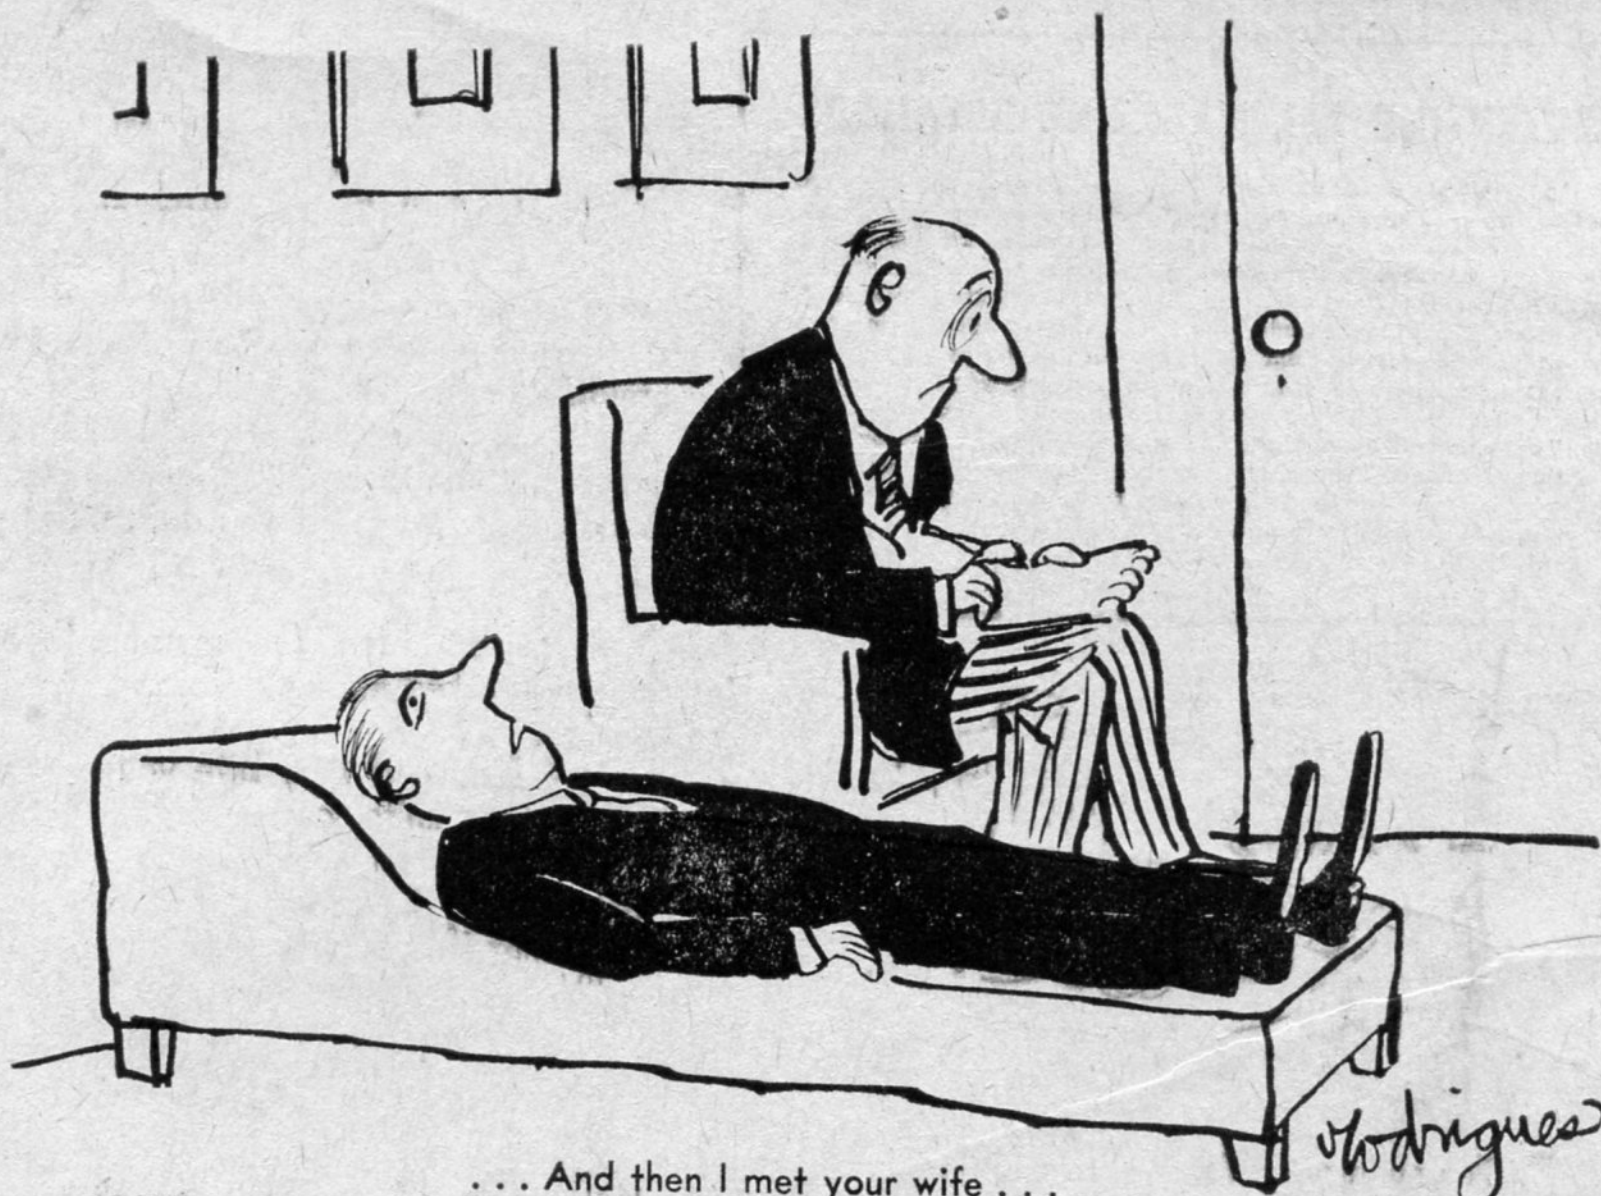

I'm not buying anything, I'm just selling your soul!

"Will you stop referring to my family as pre-marital relations!"

Three turtles decided to have a cup of coffee. Just as they went into the cafe it started to rain, so the biggest turtle said to the smallest turtle: "Go home and get the umbrella." So the little one said: "I will if you don't drink my coffee." "We won't," promised the other two.

Two years later the big turtle said to the middle turtle: "Well, I guess he isn't coming back, so we might as well drink his coffee." Just then a little voice called from outside the door: "If you do, I won't go."

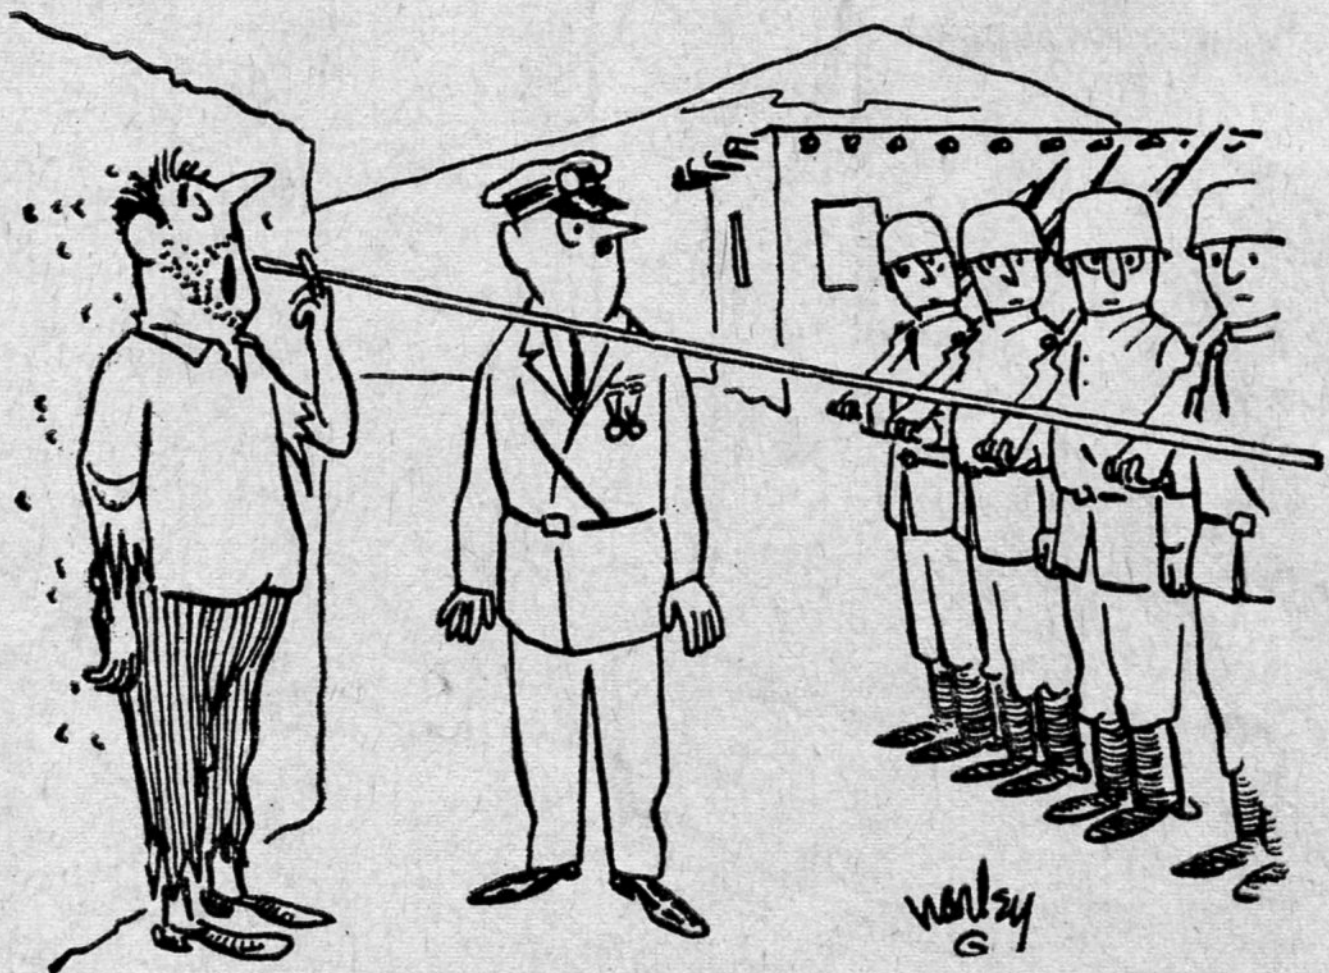

A man from Florida was up north visiting and was asked about the big Florida rattlesnakes.

"Well now, if they bite you on the arm you take a knife, cut across the bite, suck out the poison and spit it out on the ground."

"What if one bites from the rear?"

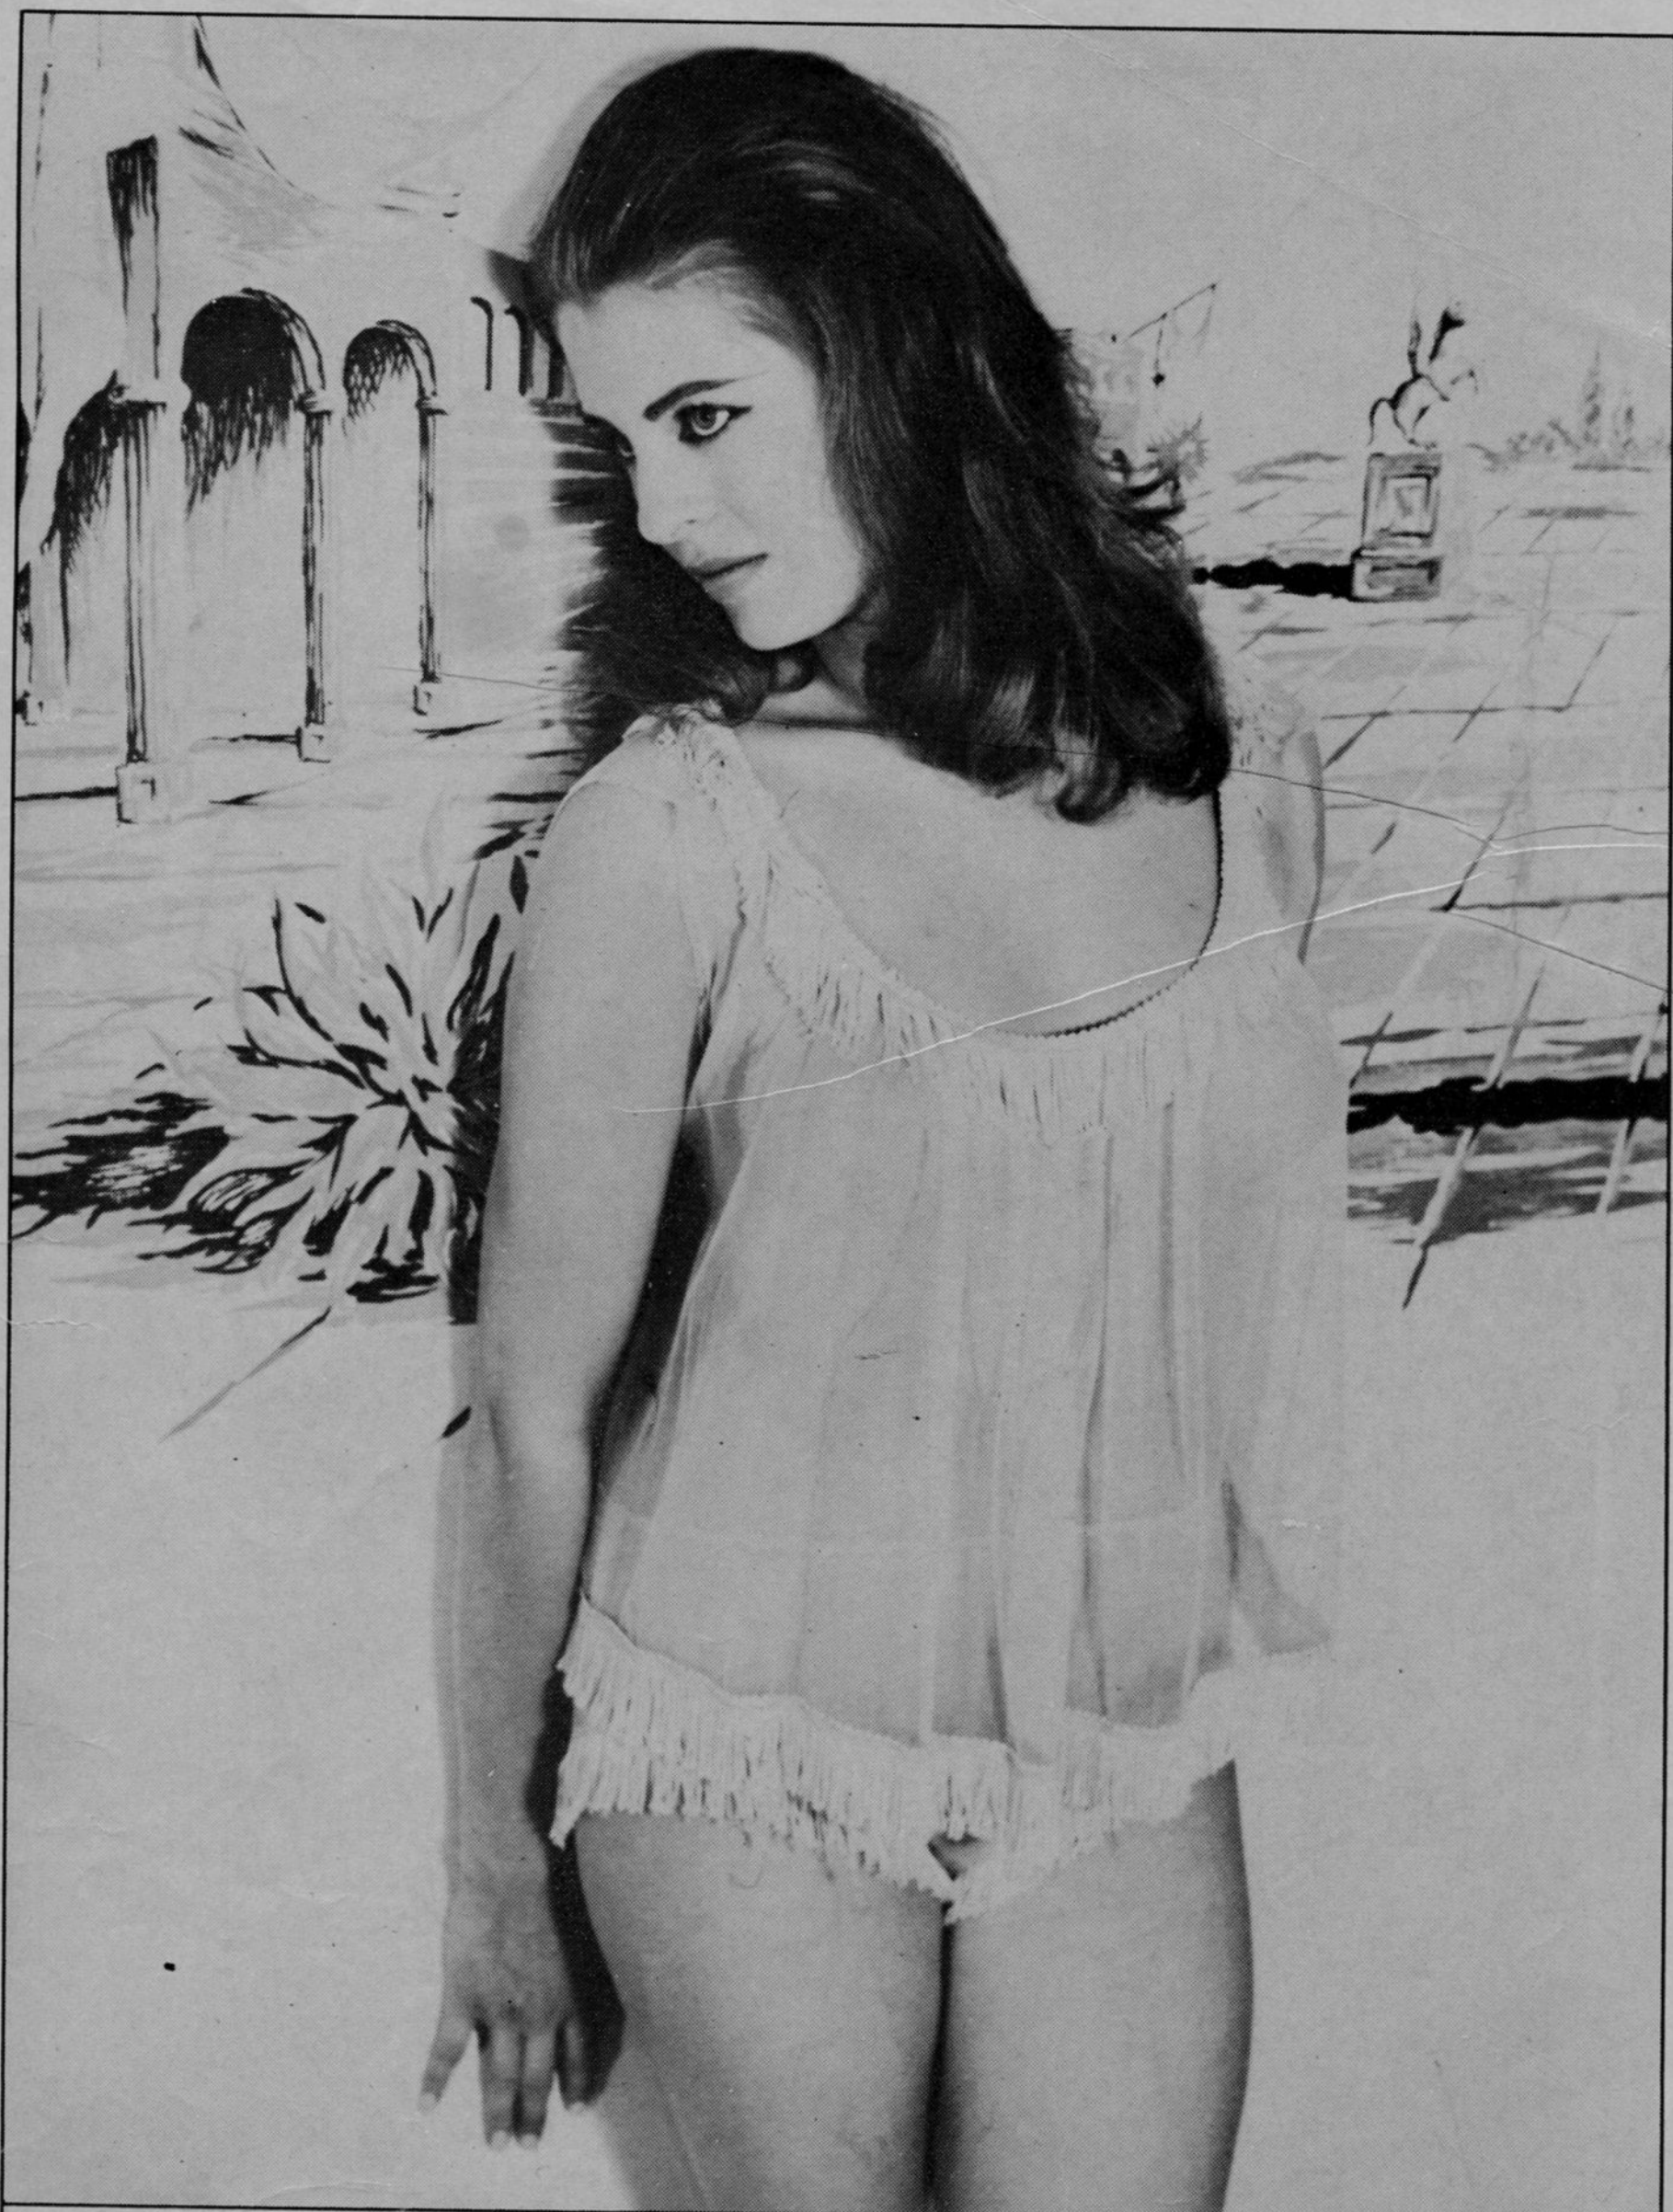

"Well now, that's when you find out who your friends are."

One goldfish to another: "O.K., wiseguy; if there's no God, who changes the water?"

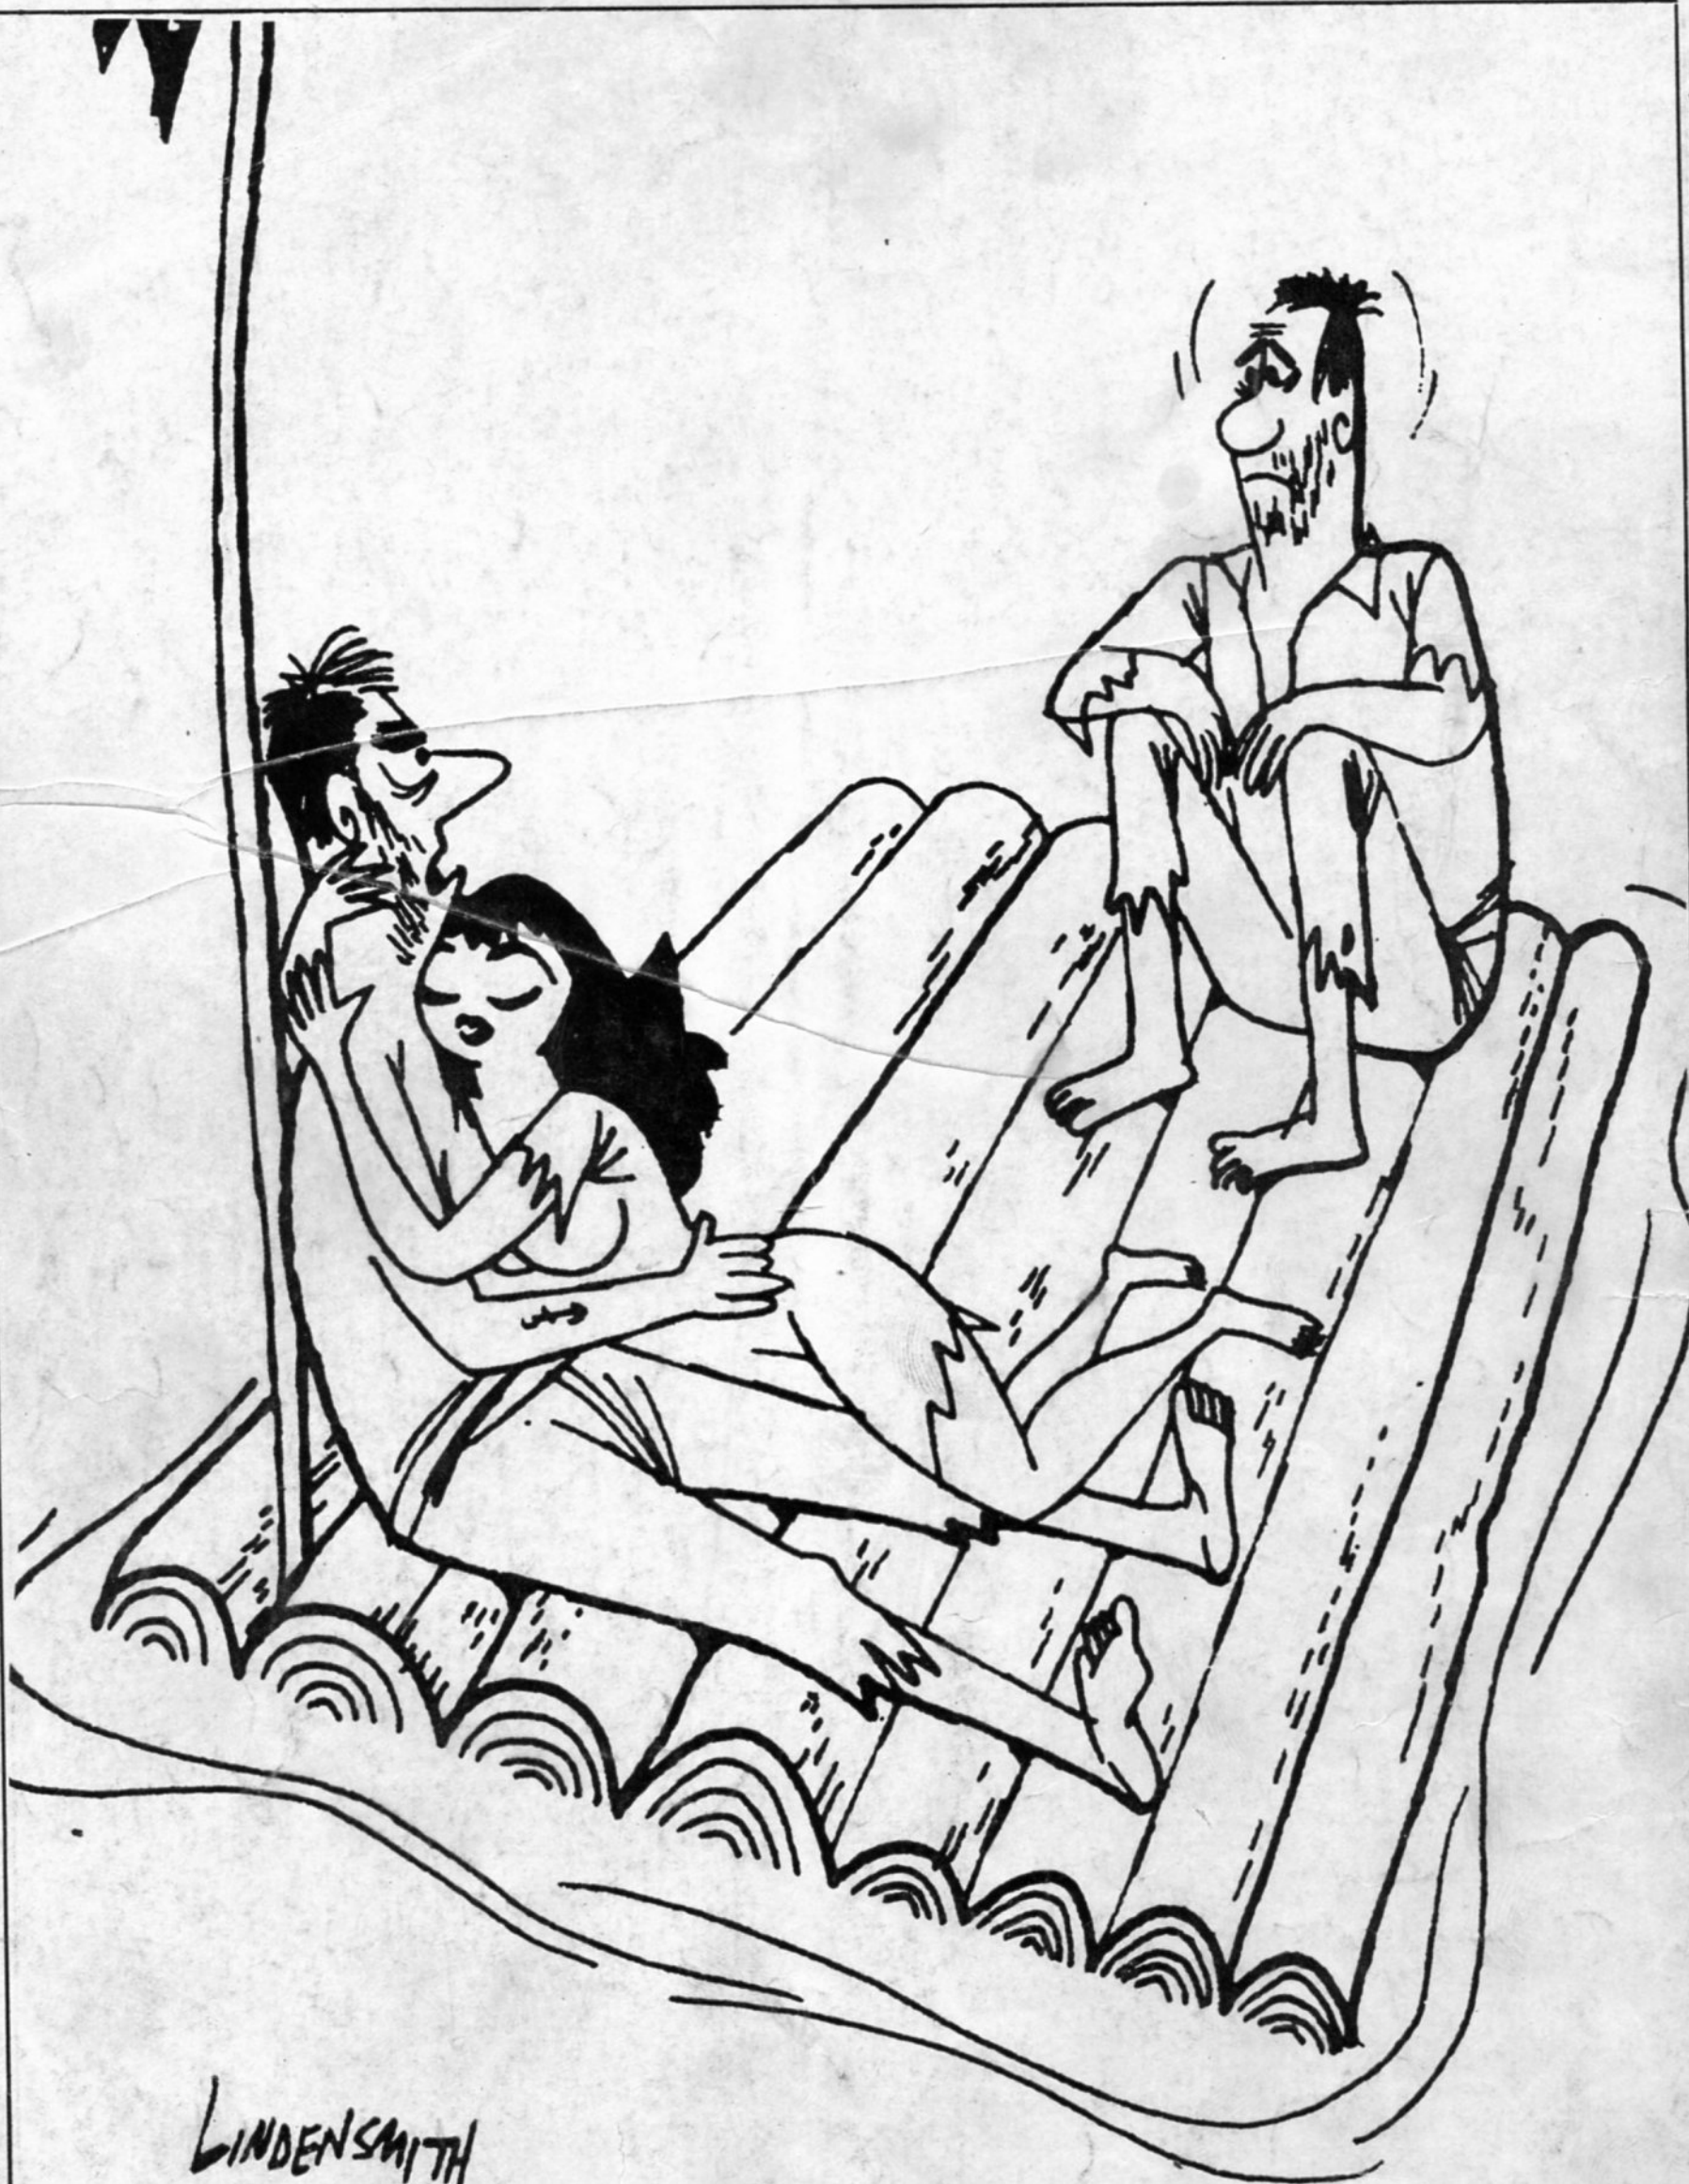

"I insist on my right to smoke one last cigarette."
